Adelaide - Australia's most expensive city for a Catholic education

Adelaide is Australia's most expensive city for a Catholic education, according to exclusive research released today.

The ASG Planning for Education Index (developed in partnership with Monash University) estimates the total cost of a Catholic education in the City of Churches will be $131,498 over a 13 period for a child starting school in 2019.

This is 3.5 per cent above the national average ($127,027) and considerably more expensive than Canberra ($126,064) and Melbourne ($121,547).

School fees ($4,447) are easily the most expensive component of a Catholic education, well ahead of other annual expenses uniforms ($445), external tuition ($612) and devices ($954).

The Index discovered a different result for parents considering a Government education for their son or daughter, with the estimated total cost of a Government education in Adelaide ($54,938), 20.1 per cent below the national average ($68,727).

School fees ($428) make up a small fraction of the estimated total cost of a Government education in Adelaide each year, with sports equipment ($292), transport ($385), external tuition ($417) and devices ($893) all adding to the estimated total cost.

The ASG Planning for Education Index also revealed Adelaide ($221,415) is one of Australia's most affordable cities for an Independent education, 25.9 per cent below the national average ($298,689).

The estimated total cost of an Independent education in Adelaide is $241,584 cheaper than Sydney ($461,999), Australia's most expensive capital for an Independent education.

School fees are the most expensive part of an Independent education in Adelaide, costing parents approximately $9,315 per child per year, well ahead of excursions ($299), musical equipment ($503) and devices ($1,168).

The Index is based on data sourced from a survey of 2,300 members on ancillary costs conducted by ASG and public information on school fees – The Good Schools Guide and the My School Website. The data was consolidated and analysed by Monash University.

Lishan Xiao has two children about to start Year 2, Year 4 at an Independent school in Adelaide.

"I've just heard the forecast costs and I actually think it's a little more than that," Ms Xiao said.

"Education in Adelaide is not cheap, but the kids really like their school.

"You can plan for school fees, but it's the hidden costs of education that take you by surprise, especially excursions, camps, devices, after school activities, sports equipment and transport."

ASG CEO Ross Higgins said irrespective of Australia's high or low inflationary environment, the cost of education has risen at more than double the rate of inflation over the past decade.

"Education costs, including tuition costs, uniforms, transport and devices are demanding a far greater share of the family budget than in the past," Mr Higgins said.

"More than ever, the costs associated with education are placing more of a burden on Australian families, who are already challenged by the rising cost of living.

"With less discretionary money to spend, it's going to be very hard to pay for education, which means parents who have saved will be in a better position in the long run.

"ASG advocates parents use a disciplined approach to saving by putting in place a dedicated savings plan, so they can financially afford to meet their children's educational goals and aspirations.

"ASG has also developed a Cost Calculator tool which may assist you looking at this data as it applies to your circumstances."

Definitions

Schools can be differentiated by their affiliation, ownership and management, and are presented as two broad categories:

- Government schools are owned and managed by State and Territory governments;
- Non-Government schools (including Catholic or Independent schools) that are owned and managed by non-government establishments. These schools have associations with religious (faith based) or secular bodies (philosophical beliefs), or are entirely independent and have values maintained by the school.
