Regional New South Wales - Australia's most expensive state for a Government education

Regional New South Wales is Australia's most expensive state for a Government education according to exclusive research released today.

The ASG Planning for Education Index (developed in partnership with Monash University) estimates the total cost of a Government education in regional New South Wales will be $73,808 over a 13 period for a child starting school in 2019.

This is 27.3 per cent above the national average ($57,994) and considerably more expensive than regional Queensland ($65,410) and regional Western Australia ($53,094).

School fees ($332) make up a small fraction of the estimated total cost of a Government education each year in regional New South Wales, with sports equipment ($349), external tuition ($915) and devices ($1,252) all costing parents more.

The Index also discovered the estimated total cost of a Government education in regional New South Wales is $7,338 more expensive than Sydney ($66,470).

ASG's research revealed a Catholic education in regional New South Wales is $112,248, 2.2 per cent above the national average ($109,877) and second only to regional Queensland ($113,211).

School fees ($3,152) are easily the most expensive component of a Catholic education in regional New South Wales, well ahead of other annual expenses including uniforms ($387), musical equipment ($484) and devices ($943).

The ASG Planning for Education Index discovered similar results for parents considering an Independent education for their son or daughter, with the estimated total cost of an Independent education in regional New South Wales ($203,654), 1.2 per cent above the national average ($201,210).

However, the Index did discover an Independent education in regional New South Wales is considerably more affordable than regional Victoria ($248,543), home of Australia's most expensive regional Independent education.

School fees are the most expensive part of an Independent education in regional New South Wales, costing parents approximately $8,500 per child per year, well ahead of uniforms ($466), transport ($626) and devices ($900).

The Index is based on data sourced from a survey of 2,300 members on ancillary costs conducted by ASG and public information on school fees – The Good Schools Guide and the My School Website. The data was consolidated and analysed by Monash University.

Suzette Hanlon's youngest child is about to start Year 9 at a Government school in regional New South Wales.

"I'm not surprised by the estimated total cost of a Government education, it's an awful lot of money," Ms Hanlon said.

"My youngest is very sporty, there's no doubt we're paying a lot more than other families on sporting equipment and travel to and from athletics carnivals and soccer games.

"You can plan for school fees, but it's the hidden costs of education that take you by surprise, especially excursions, camps, devices, and transport which costs hundreds of dollars each and every year."

ASG CEO Ross Higgins said irrespective of Australia's high or low inflationary environment, the cost of education has risen at more than double the rate of inflation over the past decade.

"Education costs, including tuition costs, uniforms, transport and devices are demanding a far greater share of the family budget than in the past," Mr Higgins said.

"More than ever, the costs associated with education are placing more of a burden on Australian families, who are already challenged by the rising cost of living.

"With less discretionary money to spend, it's going to be very hard to pay for education, which means parents who have saved will be in a better position in the long run.

"ASG advocates parents use a disciplined approach to saving by putting in place a dedicated savings plan, so they can financially afford to meet their children's educational goals and aspirations.

"ASG has also developed a Cost Calculator tool which may assist you looking at this data as it applies to your circumstances."

Definitions

Schools can be differentiated by their affiliation, ownership and management, and are presented as two broad categories:

- Government schools are owned and managed by State and Territory governments;
- Non-Government schools (including Catholic or Independent schools) that are owned and managed by non-government establishments. These schools have associations with religious (faith based) or secular bodies (philosophical beliefs), or are entirely independent and have values maintained by the school.
