The cost of educating a child in regional South Australia
*Most affordable region for private education in Australia

Regional South Australia is the most affordable region in Australia to educate a child in a private school according to exclusive research released today.

The ASG Planning for Education Index discovers for a child born in 2016 the forecast cost of a private education in regional South Australia is $287,128, $41,853 less than the national regional average ($328,981).

However, the results of the survey found the cost of a systemic¹ education in regional South Australia is $191,973, 11 per cent more than the national regional average ($172,331) and second only to regional Queensland ($193,262) as Australia's most expensive region for a systemic education.

The survey results are better for parents who plan to send their children to regional South Australian government schools.

The cost of a government education in regional South Australia is forecast to be $49,593, $1,357 less than the national regional average ($50,920), and below Australia's most expensive states for a government education, regional Victoria ($53,245) and regional New South Wales ($52,598).

The ASG Planning for Education Index also forecasts preschool or kindergarten in regional South Australia will cost parents between $2,774 and $8,330 depending on the school type.

Based on more than 12,500 responses, the index measures a range of variables including school fees, transport, uniforms, computers, school excursions and sporting trips to determine the cost of education.

Interestingly, the cost of certain variables measured as part of the ASG Planning for Education Index have not increased over the past year. For example, the costs for computers and transport costs, including the price of fuel, have declined compared to last year, while the cost of books has remained stable.

ASG member and mother of three, Renee Clark says it's frightening to think her children's education could cost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"I don't want to do the sums but my husband and I decided we would put our children, Holly (year one), Ewan (reception/prep) and Angus (three years) through private school. They attend a Catholic school and for the type of education they get and the teachers that they're exposed to, we've had an excellent experience.

"All our money goes to the mortgage and the children's education. We joined ASG when the children were very little and knowing that I'm putting away money to help their education gives me peace of mind that they're going to be able to have the best education that's available to them."

¹ A systemic education includes religious schools e.g. Catholic, Anglican, Uniting Church, Buddhist, Islamic or Hindu

ASG CEO John Velegrinis says the cost of education continued to rise at more than twice the rate of inflation over the past decade.

“Regardless of whether you send your children to a government, systemic or private school, the costs of that education will clearly increase which is why we advocate that parents start planning for education as early as possible, even from the moment their child is born.

“We’re very fortunate in Australia to have a variety of excellent government, systemic and private schools. If you have two or three children, the cost of a private education in regional South Australia could be higher than the purchase price of the family home. We advocate parents use a disciplined approach by putting a little bit away each week so they financially can afford their children’s educational goals and aspirations.”

Independent statistician and Managing Director of foreseexchange Charlie Nelson says the current economic climate is having an effect on education.

“A sudden increase in education costs would certainly be painful in the current low income growth environment.

“With school fees increasing faster than incomes, it has never been more important for parents to financially plan for their child’s future as early as possible.”

A very small number of responses were received from the Northern Territory in the most recent survey. As such, the provision of cost estimates for the Northern Territory in isolation would be highly unreliable and therefore have not been included. It is recommended that those in the Northern Territory refer to the national figures or the figures for adjoining states as a basis for planning.

Editor's notes

ASG conducts the Planning for Education Index annually, asking parents to estimate education costs, which cover preschool, primary and secondary schools in Australia. This survey includes 12,500 responses relating to the number of responses acquired from a combination of the 2013 and 2015 surveys. Data from both surveys has been combined to increase the sample size and precision of the estimates. The 2015 estimates reported are an average of the data acquired in the 2015 survey and the 2013 data, adjusted for inflation using known ABS CPI increases.

ASG is a member owned organisation, helping to create educational opportunities for children. ASG has been helping families and their children for more than 40 years. During this time, more than 520,000 children have been enrolled with ASG and more than $2.3 billion in education benefits and scholarship payments returned to members.
