The cost of educating a child in regional New South Wales
*Regional New South Wales one of the most expensive for education in Australia

Regional New South Wales is one of the most expensive regions in Australia to educate a child according to exclusive research released today.

The ASG Planning for Education Index discovers for a child born in 2016 the forecast cost of a government education in regional New South Wales ($52,598) is $1,678 more than the national regional average ($50,920). Regional Western Australia ($43,594) is the most affordable region to educate a child in the government system, $9,004 less than regional New South Wales.

The survey also reveals the estimated cost of a private education in regional New South Wales ($349,941) is $20,960 more than the national regional average, and more expensive than regional Tasmania ($340,214), regional Queensland ($326,762) and regional Western Australia ($308,323).

However, the forecast cost of a systemic¹ education in regional New South Wales ($167,021) is less than the national regional average ($172,331). Regional Queensland ($193,262) and regional South Australia ($191,973) are forecast to be the most expensive regions to educate a child in systemic schools.

The ASG Planning for Education Index also forecasts preschool or kindergarten in regional New South Wales will cost parents between $2,774 and $8,330 depending on the school type.

Based on more than 12,500 responses, the index measures a range of variables including school fees, transport, uniforms, computers, school excursions and sporting trips to determine the cost of education.

Interestingly, the cost of certain variables measured as part of the ASG Planning for Education Index have not increased over the past year. For example, the costs for computers and transport costs, including the price of fuel, have declined compared to last year, while the cost of books has remained stable.

ASG member and father of two, Ian Spurway says his future retirement plans are currently on 'handbrake,' so he can send his son to a Catholic school in Bathurst.

"Tate (year 12) travels almost 120 kilometres each day to go to school, but he chose to go there because of its rugby program. For us, the education value wasn't as important as the social capital in regards to networking and being in an environment that would enhance him and not be detrimental.

"It is costing us around $12,000 for his senior year and it is uncomfortable not having that disposable income for other investments even though we both work. It is a considerable burden, but one we find worthwhile and that is where ASG has been really beneficial, it takes the sting out of high school costs and it has helped us along in putting Tate through a private school."

ASG CEO John Velegrinis says the cost of education continued to rise at more than twice the rate of inflation over the past decade.

“Regardless of whether you send your children to a government, systemic or private school, the costs of that education will clearly increase which is why we advocate that parents start planning for education as early as possible, even from the moment their child is born.

“We’re very fortunate in Australia to have a variety of excellent government, systemic and private schools. If you have two or three children, the cost of a private education in regional New South Wales could be higher than the purchase price of the family home. We advocate parents use a disciplined approach by putting a little bit away each week so they financially can afford their children’s educational goals and aspirations.”

Independent statistician and Managing Director of foreseexchange Charlie Nelson says the current economic climate is having an effect on education.

“A sudden increase in education costs would certainly be painful in the current low income growth environment.

“With school fees increasing faster than incomes, it has never been more important for parents to financially plan for their child’s future as early as possible.”

A very small number of responses were received from the Northern Territory in the most recent survey. As such, the provision of cost estimates for the Northern Territory in isolation would be highly unreliable and therefore have not been included. It is recommended that those in the Northern Territory refer to the national figures or the figures for adjoining states as a basis for planning.

Editor's notes

ASG conducts the Planning for Education Index annually, asking parents to estimate education costs, which cover preschool, primary and secondary schools in Australia. This survey includes 12,500 responses relating to the number of responses acquired from a combination of the 2013 and 2015 surveys. Data from both surveys has been combined to increase the sample size and precision of the estimates. The 2015 estimates reported are an average of the data acquired in the 2015 survey and the 2013 data, adjusted for inflation using known ABS CPI increases.

ASG is a member owned organisation, helping to create educational opportunities for children. ASG has been helping families and their children for more than 40 years. During this time, more than 520,000 children have been enrolled with ASG and more than $2.3 billion in education benefits and scholarship payments returned to members.
